President's Message

The Vigex Committee of Management is proud to present the 2nd International Digital Photographic Salon – 2018. This year the salon received 3684 digital images from 288 entrants and 42 countries. Once again, we were particularly impressed with the high standard of entries, as you will see from the examples in this catalogue. We would like to thank all participants. All acceptances can be viewed as a slideshow using the salon DVD, or for easy access to specific images we suggest using our on-line Gallery, <http://www.vigex.co.uk/digital2018/gallery2018/gallery.html>

For 2018 we introduced a new section, Differences in Society. It was chosen as a variation from the standard sections used worldwide in an effort to encourage new image styles to add diversity to our exhibition and hopefully attract new entrants with a different story to tell.

I thank our sponsors and all the people who have worked hard to make this salon a reality, including Friends of Vigex members, other helpers and members of the Vigex Committee. Special thanks go to our judges for the time and effort they have provided to make this salon possible. We thank all our entrants for their support and hope they get value from their involvement. We suggest a look at the comments from each of the judges on the following pages.

This year we have again been unable to exhibit at our home base, the historic Osborne House, due to extensive mould removal and repair work. We thank the City of Greater Geelong for their support for this major heritage project and for providing alternative judging and exhibition venues for Vigex during this period.

We look forward to seeing more of our entrants' work in our Print Salon next year, or our next Digital Salon in 2020.

Brien Cohn, President

Salon Jury's Word

John Chapman

It was an honour to be invited for the third time to judge at VIGEX. The exhibition is always well run. There were many good images and selecting the best was not an easy task.

There were many good images in Monochrome and the award winners were excellent. It was also apparent a number of entrants have technical issues as there was no true black. The last step in preparing most monochrome images (except high key) should be to apply a Levels process to ensure tones cover the full range from black to white.

In Creative, there were some very interesting images that were the result of a lot of creative ideas and lightroom work. There were a small number that looked to be the output of a photoshop filter and these scored poorly. While this might have been enough for acceptance standard a few years ago, software and creative photographers have moved on and are now creating far more interesting images. Clever ideas that use primarily photography with minimal software work can still do well but generally extensive post processing has become the normal in this category.

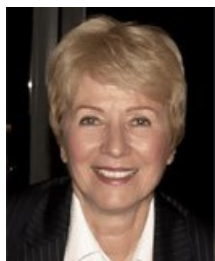

In the PhotoTravel and Differences in Society sections there were a number of images that were black and white only. Some of these would have gained awards but as the exhibition specified no monochrome, they were ineligible. If you want to present a monochrome style image in a colour only section a suggestion is to retain or add a spot colour to a small area thus making the image a duotone.

In PhotoTravel while there were many good travel images, some had excessive processing (usually HDR) and no longer appeared natural as required in the definition. While the image might be a good travel subject, over-processing will result in lower scores. Only minimal processing is allowed and in PhotoTravel all images must appear natural looking.

Two issues applied to all sections. The first was over-sharpening and such images often receive lower scores. My advice is to sharpen an image to where you can just see its razor sharp, step back to no sharpening then apply the same sharpening again with between 50% and 70% of the first sharpening amount. The image should still appear sharp without looking over sharp. If the edges jump out or catch the viewers' attention, then its over-sharp.

The other issue I saw that occurred in all sections with a small number of entrants was due to resizing. The images had been stretched to fit all of the exhibition screen size of 1920 x 1080 and were distorted. When resizing, select the smaller size and let the width be set according to the aspect ratio. For a 4:3 scaled image the image presented should be 1440 x 1080 pixels. All images are considered equally regardless of whether they fill all of the screen or not. Distorting an image is more likely to reduce your success rather than improve it.

Overall the standard was good. I saw many interesting images and those that gained awards can be proud of their work. Congratulations to the entrants, the committee and most importantly the helpers who made our two days of judging more enjoyable.

Elizabeth Kodela

I had the honour of judging at VIGEX this year and was so impressed with the VIGEX committee who were well organized and worked with speed and efficiency. The assisting members were most helpful also and the whole two day event worked like a well-oiled machine. They were as good as if not better than any international team I have worked with. My thanks to you all for your kind assistance to make my visit a great experience.

I judged Monochrome, Travel, Creative and Difference. Apart from some muddy midtones in Monochrome most images were of a high standard from worldwide photographers. As usual many colour images were from Asia and China. Sometimes oversaturation and over sharpening was an issue in general. Overall the winning images were outstanding.

It was interesting to see how entrants interpreted the new category of 'Difference' and the thought processes that took place. The dictionary says 'The state or condition of being different or unlike a point in which things differ'! This category deserves some consideration by the entrant and most participants understood the message!

Salon Jury's Word

Pele Leung

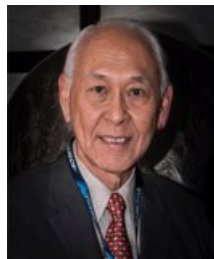

It is an honour to be a judge of Vigex 2018. I judged four sections including Mono Open, Creative, Photo Travel and Differences in Society. It wasn't an easy task to run through nearly 2000 images even when we were given two full days. Fortunately a very efficient projection and scoring system was used.

In terms of image quality, many images were of high quality and sometimes it was hard to determine which one was better than others. Perhaps it is worth mentioning the importance of following the section requirements carefully. Unfortunately, in a few occasions, although some images were of exceptional high quality, we still had to disqualify them due to the image requirement specified.

Differences in Society was a new section introduced this year and there was no previous judging reference we could borrow from. In addition to the standard image selection criteria used for judging, one of the major factors was to look for the differences highlighted in a single image. For example, for young and old, ideally we hope to see both attributes on the same image as this would demonstrate the strongest contrast and give greatest impact. Hopefully, this could help entrants to prepare and submit their matching images next year.

I would like to take the opportunity to congratulate all winners for their great achievements this year. Considering the tough acceptance percentage, it is still a valuable achievement even if you had only one image being accepted. After studying the winning images on this catalogue, I am sure Vigex would receive even more competitive images next year.

Finally I would like to thank all Vigex volunteers for their effort to make this event come true and look forward to seeing more fascinating images in the future. Till next time.

Tuck Leong

It was a pleasure and privilege to be part of the panel to judge the Colour Open and Nature Digital Salon. I congratulate the successful entrants in gaining acceptances and awards in both the sections. In the main the submissions were of a high standard both technically and with artistic applications.

The Colour Open section had many wonderfully conceived and fascinating concepts. It was a surprise to find excellent nature images entered in the Open Section. There were exceptions where considered cropping, colour contrast, attention to distracting highlights and sharpening could enhance the images.

The Nature Section was outstanding with varied subject interests, excellent natural history story, and especially the macro images of insects taken with incredible sharpness and details. With the high technical, natural history imagery excellence the images scored well through-out. The panel noted that there were images entered of identical subject topic, similar situation and locations and should have been avoided.

I congratulate the VIGEX committee for the very efficient way the judging weekend was attended to and catered. The process went with little disruption. The committee in organising the Digital Exhibition and collating the entries prior to the judging weekend undoubtedly put in a major effort. Congratulations to all involved with the Digital Salon.

Salon Jury's Word

Peter Kewley

It was a privilege to be invited to judge two sections at the VIGEX Digital Judging this year.

All of the images presented in the Open Colour section were of a high standard and visually impressive to judge.

As in all competitions there are stand out images that jump out at you and I trust that we have selected the best of the best for the Open Colour section.

The Nature section also contained a number of outstanding images; however, it was noted that some images contained signs of man-made objects, some quite prominent that did not meet the definition of "Nature". Entrants need to look closely at the definitions particularly in important categories such as Nature.

Graeme Watson

I would like to thank the VIGEX Committee for the opportunity to join the judging panel to assess the entries in OPEN COLOUR and NATURE for VIGEX 2018.

As a general comment to international entrants, whether new or seasoned, it remains a fact that judges are just ordinary human beings and are likely to reflect the usual biases, likes and dislikes of a cross section of the community.

Judges are normally selected for their exhibition experience and successes as well as their ability to assess images efficiently while remembering that the images presented are the entrants' best attempts and someone's "pride and joy".

Entering an exhibition is similar to playing a sport at a high level. The entrant must have a good working knowledge of the rules as well as having a reasonable idea of their strengths and weaknesses. Having an idea of the strength of the fellow competitors is very handy and using your "team" of images to their best advantage is essential.

Judges see a lot of images which are not quite up to international exhibition acceptance level (around 60% to 70%). There are many reasons that images fall short but good images usually show that the author shows good "field craft" skills, good story telling skills, good camera handling skills and good editing skills.

An emerging trend is becoming evident where new photographers are using their phone or their new camera to produce images for the purpose of "social media likes". With many "likes" they then enter the image in competition on the false premise that the image has an intrinsic quality in the wider world, only to be deflated with a non-acceptance.

OPEN COLOUR

As usually happens the most successful images were very good indeed with a clear story line as well as originality and a high degree of camera craft and editing skills. An image that succeeds at the highest level is usually one that has the judge thinking "WOW" either in a powerfully stated way or in a very subtle way.

A lot of unsuccessful images were either tired clichés of great images of the past or technically not handled well. Incorrect exposure, contrast, lighting, sharpening, cropping, choice of subject, copying good ideas from the past, and breaching rules and best practice guidelines, were all negatives that detracted from the strength of many images. Also sentimental photos that have great weight within the family are not necessarily going to win a judge's heart.

NATURE

The bulk of the entrants in this section were aware of the FIAP Nature Definition but some were either new to nature salons and fell foul of the full intent of the definition or, more likely, were not sure of how it should be applied in nature sections.

The usual spread of "feathers and furs" was present and many were very well done indeed. Some of the flower and insect images were extremely well done and carried the day mainly on selection of a good subject which was photographed in simple lighting, with razor sharp focus and non-intrusive backgrounds.

Congratulations to all the top award winners and, indeed, all who entered.
